

CALL FOR PAPERS

Nature, Theosophy and Related Esoteric Currents

16-17-~~18~~ November 2024 Ascona, Switzerland.

Nature has always been a point of interest for humanity, but in recent times, it has become even more significant due to environmental issues, most notably climate change. Theosophy places significant emphasis on the importance of nature, viewing it as not only an expression of the one life, but also as containing spiritual and hidden dimensions, encouraging individuals to foster a deep connection with the natural world and to seek out the spiritual truths that can be found within it. In agreement with other esoteric currents such as hermeticism and the occult arts, Theosophical teachings maintain a strong focus on nature as a living entity and the idea that all life is interconnected. Life is embodied in numerous spiritual beings, energies, natural kingdoms and a divine will that pushes towards harmonious order and beauty. Furthermore, as with other esoteric currents, the Theosophical Society emphasizes the importance of the study of the three-way relation between humanity, nature, and the divine as a means for humanity to live in harmony with the greater whole.

Outlines of theosophical cosmology, such as the one given in H. P. Blavatsky's The Secret Doctrine (1888), were in fact presented as an ancient key to understand the universe and our place in it. Unlike the cosmology of many religions and of science, every entity is perceived not only as living and conscious but also as descending from the spiritual and evolving through the various planes of existence encompassing matter and spirit.

This conference invites reflection and research on understanding the particular views and practices cultivated by the Theosophical and other esoteric currents concerning nature. It also welcomes studies that are either in contrast to or in alignment with dominant views and narratives formulated by traditional religions, philosophies, or sciences.

Other issues relating to nature and previously addressed by philosophers are also welcome, including issues that are of special interest today, including the following questions:

- Should nature be left untouched or shaped by human intervention?
- Are humans separate from and superior to nature?
- Is nature conscious and alive?
- What relations exist between humans, animals, plants and nature in general?

Reflections and discussions on the theme of nature are both relevant and urgent today, given the current state of the planet. Furthermore, studying nature reveals more clearly those genealogies of knowledge about spiritual understandings of nature that have been cultivated from the birth of the Theosophical Society and certainly throughout history.

Themes include:

–Spiritual cosmology

- Living nature
- Human nature
- The relations between the kingdoms of nature, including the elemental and deva kingdoms
- Animation, animism
- Sustainability
- Non-human animals and personhood; non-human animals, consciousness and soul; animals rights.
- Ecology, Deep Ecology, climate change
- Vegetarianism, veganism
- Practices to align with or overcome nature, including teaching and initiation
- Embodiment
- Technology and nature
- Gardens and parks, Theosophical campuses
- Sacred places, sacred geometry
- Artistic expressions related to nature, visual art, music, literature, architecture

All interested parties are welcome to be creative and to submit proposals not listed above, but they must be related to the general theme of the Conference.

Key-Note Speaker:

Professor Kocku von Stuckrad

Paper Proposals

Any person may submit a paper to the conference committee on any aspect of the subject. To be considered as a presenter at the Conference, please submit an abstract between 300/400 words with a 50-word biography to Erica Georgiades, via email (erica.georgiades@gmail.com). A limited number of online-only proposals can be accepted, so please indicate if your proposal is 'online-only'. The conference committee will evaluate all paper proposals prior to acceptance.

THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THEOSOPHICAL HISTORY CONFERENCE AND THEOSOPHICAL HISTORY JOURNAL.

The purposes of holding the International Theosophical History Conferences are practical in nature: to maintain interest in the subject, to assess the status of research in the area, and finally to provide material for publication within The Theosophical History journal. If the presenter wishes to publish in the journal, we advise that the style of the final text and endnotes conform to Chicago Style and that a digital submission be sent for review to the editor (Tim Rudbøg timrudboeg@hum.ku.dk) in Word format no later than two months following the Conference. To visit the website of the Theosophical History journal, please <https://theohistory.org/>
